4. Colonel Dunn of JCS called in reference to the priorities problem. He said General Partridge was the proper man to see. I checked a memo from General Cabell to General Smith which said Partridge was responsible for making information in the hands of the JCS available to CIA for the purpose of making National Estimates. I called Dunn back and told him it appeared to me that Partridge was not the channel for my problem and that since I had already been referred to four different places in the Pentagon, I wanted to make sure this was the right one. He agreed to see Partridge and call me back. He did, and said that Partridge was not the right place but that [REDACTED], Chief of the JSPD, was. I called [REDACTED] and talked to [REDACTED]. [REDACTED] assures me that [REDACTED] office is the right place, and I have arranged to see [REDACTED] at 9:30 on Monday morning.
